Short Story

Submitted by Eleanor Liu

Joy could scarcely believe her eyes when she walked into the Women's Department of the Montgomery Fair.

There at the counter was a girl wearing the dress stolen from her car two weeks ago. There was no doubt that it was her dress, made for her by her dressmaker. She got out her phone and took a picture while seeming to make a call.

She moved discretely around looking at various items and managed to get a front view without obviously taking pictures. She kept the girl in view and followed as she left the store.

Dexter Avenue is very wide and cars are parked at an angle so it was easy for her to snap a picture of the car and license plate as the girl unlocked a nearby car. Joy thought of going to Neil's office but instead went directly to the Police Station. She was glad to see Lt. Joe Burns who had taken their report of the theft two weeks before.

"Hello, Ms. Clemons, do you have further information for me?"

"Yes, I do and I also want to know if you have made any progress. I just saw a girl wearing my dress. She was in the Montgomery Fair and I took pictures of her and of her car with the license number."

"Did you speak to her?"

"No, I thought about it but decided not to raise her suspicion. I took the pictures in a way that was not obvious."

"That was smart of you not to speak to her and with the pictures we can prove the dress is the same since you gave us pictures of you in the dress. We can find the car owner now, I just hope the car was not stolen too."

"We have not made much headway, but we have reported the stolen items to Pawn Shops, Used items stores and even Thrift Shops. So far none of them have reported receiving anything."

"Thank you very much and please let us know when you make any progress."

"Will do, and thank you for coming by."

"Goodbye."

Chapter 2

By Eleanor Liu

Two weeks earlier, Neil and Joy were preparing to drive to Charleston, S. C. to attend his brother's wedding. Neil was to be best man and had decided to rent the Tux when they got to Charleston several days ahead of the wedding. Joy had selected material and her dressmaker had made her a lovely dress. She would be helping at the Reception but would not be in the Ceremony.

"Neil, do you think it is a good idea to pack the car tonight?" Joy asked.

"Yes, because we want to get an early start in the morning."

"I am concerned though since we don't have a garage and the car will be on the street."

"Yes, but this is a quiet neighborhood and I think it will be okay."

So they put their suitcases, presents for the couple and the clothing bag with her dress in the car, locked it and went to bed.

The next morning when they went out with their small cases of personal items, they discovered the awful truth. A back window was broken and everything they had packed was gone.

Joy was thankful she had kept her jewelry with her cosmetic case. At least she still had it to wear at the wedding.

"I am sorry I didn't listen to you last night, honey but I really thought it would be okay. Now we will first go by the Police station and make a report. We have 368 miles to drive today, and I hope we can make it before too late."

They went by the Police station and gave the report with a list of the missing items. They took pictures of the car and dusted for fingerprints. Since they found none the thief or thieves must have worn gloves. They also gave the Lt. Burns two pictures of Joy in her dress.
